Spreading the word about safety

Place mats with water safety tips being distributed to restaurants, other businesses

By HP STAFF

SOUTH HAVEN — Visitors to lakeshore communities like South Haven and St. Joseph are often unaware of the dangers posed by the inviting water of Lake Michigan.

But what looks refreshing and fun too often takes into a family's worst nightmare.

This week, first responders in South Haven dealt with a drowning death, after a 20-year-old Lansing man went into the Big Lake at North Beach on Sunday evening and never returned to shore. The same evening, a man was rescued by good Samaritans after he was swept off the North Pier and into the Black River channel. Then on Tuesday, a first responder from South Haven Area Emergency Services rescued a couple and their 3-year-old boy from the channel after the canoe they were in capsized between the piers.

"Drownings in the Great Lakes, including in the South Haven area, are a grave concern," said Fire Chief Brandon Hinz. "As we examined ways to prevent future tragedies, it became apparent that there is a lack of awareness by the public, especially guests in the community, to the inherent dangers posed by the lake."

To educate the public of these dangers, SHAES, in cooperation with Safe Kids Greater South Haven – led by Bronson South Haven Hospital and The Great Lakes Water Safety Consortium – has designed a custom-made beach safety place mat for distribution to local businesses, particularly restaurants. Owners of short-term rentals also are being encouraged to post the place mat in their rental units.

Illustrator Jessica Byers of South Haven created a colorful array of graphics highlighting topics such as beach flag warnings, tips for escaping rip currents, advice about walking on the pier, when to use life jackets, and even digging in the sand. On the back of the placemat are water-safety related kids activities. The project was initiated by former SHAES Chief Ron Wise.

"Making sure our children are safe is the top priority of the Safe Kids Coalition in Greater South Haven," said Dr. Matthew Dommer, chief operating officer and vice president for

Presumed drowning victim ID'd by police

Lansing man had just turned 20

By BECKY KARK

SOUTH HAVEN — Authorities have released the name of the 20-year-old man from Lansing who is now presumed drowned after going into heavy Lake Michigan surf on Sunday night to swim.

Van Buren County Sheriff's Department Capt. Virg Franks, Wednesday, identified the man as Jaedon Odunuga-Evans.

Efforts to find Evans began shortly after 9 p.m. Sunday and continued throughout the day on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Rough water conditions and poor visibility underwater, however, have hampered rescue efforts, according to Brandon Hinz, fire chief for South Haven Area Emergency Services, which has been conducting the search along with the U.S. Coast Guard, and marine patrols from Van Buren and Allegan county sheriff's departments.

Divers were able to conduct a search Monday when visibility underwater was limited to six inches or less. Tuesday and then again Wednesday, rescuers had to rely on other search methods.

"Drones and side scan sonar. Still way too murky," Hinz said.

Evans had just celebrated his 20th birthday Saturday and was at the lake Sunday with family members. Several family members went swimming in the lake and came out. When Evans didn't return to shore, they called 911.

Evans is the son of Lola Odunuga and Kissadrick Evans. His mother could not be reached for comment Wednesday, but she described her son on Facebook as a person who liked to make people smile or laugh. He had planned to leave in September for National Guard training and was scheduled to graduate from Lansing Community

Court: Absentee ballots that come after election won't count

By DAVID EGGERT
Associated Press

LANSING — The Michigan appeals court denied a request to require the counting of absentee ballots received after the time polls close on Election Day, ruling that the battleground state's deadline remains intact despite voters' approval of a constitutional amendment that expanded mail-in voting.

The court, in a 2-1 decision released Wednesday, said it is up to lawmakers to change the deadline that has been in place for at least 91 years. The League of Women Voters of Michigan and three voters sued in May, seeking a declaration that absentee ballots be counted as long as they are mailed on or before Election Day and are received within six days of the election.

The plaintiffs, who will appeal to the state Supreme Court, pointed to voters' new constitutional rights to cast an absentee ballot without giving a reason 40 days before an election and to do it in person or by mail. They also noted fears of visiting polling places during the coronavirus pandemic.

"We follow the view that courts should typically defer to the Legislature in making policy decisions," Judge David Sawyer wrote, adding that organizers of the ballot drive did not include a deadline in the initiative.

Judge Michael Riordan agreed with the ruling, while Judge Elizabeth Gleicher dissented.

"This case should be easy," she said. "Because voters have a right to vote by mail if they mail their ballots to the clerk during the 40 days before an election, they have right to have their votes counted when those votes arrive in the clerk's office. This interpretation squares with the historical and legal meaning of voting. It corresponds with the voters' intent."

The Republican-controlled Legislature appears unlikely to revise the deadline.

The judges unanimously rejected a request to compel Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson to direct local clerks to provide paid postage on return envelopes.

The suit said inherent variations in mail delivery schedules could result in one person having the ballot counted and another not, even if they send them back on the same day. It also said the deadline especially burdens undecided and late-deciding voters and said at least 11 states count ballots sent by Election Day.

About 1.75 percent of ballots were not counted in the recent May local elections because they came in too late.

Sharon Dolente, voting rights strategist for the American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan – which assisted in suing the state – said the deadline "could lead to tens of thousands of voters being disenfranchised this year. We must ensure voters have the full timeline to submit their ballots from home by mail and give Michigan clerks and staff more time to process ballots."

Donald Trump won Michigan by slightly more than 10,700 votes in 2016.

A similar suit – funded by Priorities USA, a powerful super PAC in Democratic politics – is pending in the state Court of Claims. Arguments were heard last week.

Committee will examine Lewis Cass ISD name issue

By LOUISE WREGE
HP Staff Writer

CASSOPOLIS — The legacy of Lewis Cass, a longtime territorial governor of Michigan in the early 1800s, will be scrutinized in the next few months by a committee being formed by the Lewis Cass Intermediate School District.

ISD President Kevin Anderson said it's appropriate to reconsider the name of the district at this time.

"It's been part of our name, part of our history, for quite some time," Anderson said. "But I think some of the background information that was shared by the governor certainly brings to light that we should have a conversation about our name."

Gov. Gretchen Whitmer recently renamed the state-owned Lewis Cass Building in Lansing. A news release about the renaming said that while Cass was important to the state's history, he also owned a slave, defended a system that would permit the expansion of slavery and implemented a policy to forcibly remove Native Americans from their tribal lands.

Superintendent Brent Holcomb said that if committee members decide to recommend that the name be changed, they will be tasked with coming up with suggestions.

Walmart latest retailer to require customers to wear masks

By ANNE D'INNOCENZIO
AP Retail Writer

Julio Cortez / AP file

A woman pulls groceries from a cart to her vehicle outside of a Walmart store in Pearl, Miss. on March 31. Walmart will require customers to wear face coverings at all of its namesake and Sam's Club stores. The company said the policy will go into effect on Monday, to allow time to inform stores and customers.

NEW YORK — Walmart will require customers to wear face coverings at all of its namesake and Sam's Club stores, making it the largest retailer to introduce such a policy that has otherwise proven difficult to enforce without state and federal requirements.

The company said Wednesday that the policy will go into effect on Monday to allow time to inform customers. Currently, about 65 percent of its more than 5,000 stores and clubs are located in areas where there is already some form of government mandate on face coverings.

Bentonville, Arkansas-based Walmart joins a growing but still small list of retailers to require masks at all of its stores, filling the role of states and the federal government that have failed to issue such mandates on an issue that has been highly politicized by President Donald Trump and many of his ardent supporters.

Given Walmart's clout as the largest retailer in the U.S., its decision is expected to push others to issue similar mandates. In fact, hours after its announcement, supermarket chain Kroger Co. said it would follow suit starting July 22.

"We are taking this extra step now because we recognize additional precautions are needed to protect our country," Kroger said in a statement.

Last week, Starbucks announced that customers who visit its company-owned café locations in the U.S. will be required to wear face coverings. The policies at Starbucks and Best Buy went into effect Wednesday.

Only a handful of major retailers, including teen clothing chain American Eagle Outfitters and Apple, has a mask mandate for customers for all of its stores. Costco Wholesale Club was one of the first major retailers to require face coverings for customers at all of its stores. The policy went into effect in early May.

The National Retail Federation, the nation's largest retail trade group, said in a statement that it hopes Walmart's move will be a "tipping point in this public health debate."

Retailers had been hesitant to issue chain-wide mandates for fear of angering some customers. They also didn't want to have their workers play the role of enforcers of the protocols. It was already hard enough to get some customers to comply even in the states that had the mandates. However, the recent surge of new virus cases – particularly in Florida, California, Texas and Arizona – has left them with no choice, retail experts say.

"I think Walmart's decision will give cover to other retailers to require masks," said Michael J. Hicks, an economist at Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana. "I applaud Walmart and others for stepping in."

Bryan Eshelman, a managing director in the retail practice at consultancy AlixPartners, noted that retailers needed to step in to reduce their own health risks and that having a virus case is disruptive.

"It is a business risk that they need to manage for the safety of employees and customers," he said.

Eshelman added that he believes making shoppers comply with the mask protocols will be easier now that wearing masks are becoming more of the norm.

Coronavirus data is funneled away from CDC, sparking worries

By MIKE STOBBE and BERNARD CONDON
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hospital data related to the coronavirus pandemic in the U.S. will now be collected by a private technology firm, rather than the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention – a move the Trump administration says will speed up reporting but one that concerns some public health leaders.

The CDC director said Wednesday that he's fine with the change – even though some experts fear it will further sideline the agency.

The CDC has agreed to step out of the government's traditional data collection process "in order to streamline reporting," Dr. Robert Redfield said during a call with reporters set up by the agency's parent, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

HHS officials recently posted a document on the agency's website that redirected hospitals' daily reporting of a range of data meant to assess the impact of the coronavirus on them. TeleTracking Technologies, based in Pittsburgh, will now collect that information.

However, if hospitals are already directly reporting to state health departments, they can get a written release from the state to keep doing that.

The information includes bed occupancy, staffing levels, the severity level of coronavirus patients, ventilators on hand, and supplies of masks, gowns, and other personal protective equipment. The CDC will continue to collect other data, like information about cases and deaths, from state health departments.

Michael Caputo, an HHS spokesman, said the CDC has been seeing a lag of a week or more in data coming from hospitals and that only 85 percent of hospitals have been participating. The change is meant to result in faster and more complete reporting, he said.

BREAKING NEWS…

Men's Virility Restored in Clinical Trial; 275% More Blood Flow in 5 Minutes

A newly improved version of America's best-selling male performance enhancer gives 70-year-old men the ability and stamina they enjoyed in their 30's.

America's best-selling sexual performance enhancer just got a lot better.

It's the latest breakthrough for nitric oxide – the molecule that makes E.D. woes fade and restores virility when it counts the most.

A new discovery that increases nitric oxide availability was recently proven in a clinical trial to boost blood flow 275%

Nitric oxide won the Nobel Prize in 1998. It's why "the little blue pill" works. More than 200,000 studies confirm it's the key to superior sexual performance.

And this new discovery increases nitric oxide availability resulting in even quicker, stronger and longer-lasting performance.

One double-blind, placebo-controlled study (the "gold-standard" of research) involved a group of 70-year-old-men.

They didn't exercise. They didn't eat healthy. And researchers reported their "nitric oxide availability was almost totally compromised," resulting in blood flow less than HALF of a man in peak sexual health.

But only five minutes after the first dose their blood flow increased 275%, back to levels of a perfectly healthy 31-year-old man! "It's amazing," remarks nitric oxide expert Dr. Al Sears. "That's like giving 70-year-old men the sexual power of 30-year-olds."

WHY SO MUCH EXCITEMENT?

Despite the billions men spend annually on older nitric oxide therapies, there's one well-known problem with them.

They don't always work.

Dr. Joseph Loscalzo explains why. He's studied nitric oxide for over 43 years. He is the physician-in-chief at Brigham and Women's Hospital. He says a "deficiency of bioactive nitric oxide… leads to impaired endothelium-dependent vasorelaxation."

In plain English, these older products may increase levels of nitric oxide. But that's only half the battle. If it's not bioactively available then your body can't absorb it to produce an erection.

Experts simply call it the nitric oxide "glitch." And until now, there's never been a solution.

NEXT GENERATION NITRIC OXIDE FORMULA FLYING OFF SHELVES

Upon further research, America's No. 1 men's health expert Dr. Al Sears discovered certain nutrients fix this "glitch" resulting in 275% better blood flow.

He's combined those nutrients with proven nitric oxide boosters in a new formula called Primal Max Red. In clinical trials, 5,000 mg is required for satisfying sexual performance. Primal Max Red contains a bigger, 9,000 mg per serving dose. It's become so popular, he's having trouble keeping it in stock.

Dr. Sears is the author of more than 500 scientific papers. Thousands of people listened to him speak at the recent Palm Beach Health & Wellness Festival featuring Dr. Oz. NFL Hall of Fame quarterback Joe Namath recently visited his clinic, the Sears Institute for Anti-Aging Medicine.

Primal Max Red has only been available for a few months — but everyone who takes it reports a big difference. "I have the energy to have sex three times in one day, WOW! That has not happened in years. Oh, by the way I am 62," says Jonathan K. from Birmingham, AL.

HOW IT WORKS

Loss of erection power starts with your blood vessels. Specifically, the inside layer called the endothelium where nitric oxide is made.

The problem is various factors THICKEN your blood vessels as you age. This blocks availability causing the nitric oxide "glitch." The result is difficulty in getting and sustaining a healthy erection.

How bad is the problem?

Researcher shows the typical 40-year-old man absorbs 50% less nitric oxide. At 50, that drops to 25%. And once you pass 60 just a measly 15% gets through.

To make matters worse, nitric oxide levels start declining in your 30's. And by 70, nitric oxide production is down an alarming 75%.

Primal Max Red is the first formula to tackle both problems. Combining powerful nitric oxide boosters and a proven delivery mechanism that defeats the nitric oxide "glitch" resulting in 275% better blood flow. There's not enough space here to fully explain how it works, so Dr. Sears will send anyone who orders Primal Max Red a free special report that explains everything.

MORE CLINICAL RESULTS

Nutrients in Primal Max Red have logged impressive results.

In a Journal of Applied Physiology study, one resulted in a 30 times MORE nitric oxide. And these increased levels lasted up to 12 hours.

"I measured my nitric oxide levels, you can buy a test kit from Amazon," reports 48-year-old Jeff O. "Monday night I showed depleted."

Then he used ingredients in Primal Max Red and, "The results were off the charts. I first woke around 3 a.m. on Tuesday with a throbbing boner. My nitric oxide levels measured at the top end of the range."

FREE BONUS TESTOSTERONE BOOSTER

Every order also gets Dr. Sears testosterone boosting formula Primal Max Black for free.

"If you want passionate 'rip your clothes off' sex you had in your younger days, you need nitric oxide to get your erection going. And testosterone for energy and drive," says Dr. Sears. "You get both with Primal Max Red and Primal Max Black."

HOW TO GET PRIMAL MAX

To secure free bottles of Primal Max Black and get the hot, new Primal Max Red formula, buyers should contact the Sears Health Hotline at 1-800-765-0046 within the next 48 hours. "It's not available in drug stores yet," says Dr. Sears. "The Hotline allows us to ship directly to the customer."

Dr. Sears feels so strongly about Primal Max, all orders are backed by a 100% money-back guarantee. "Just send me back the bottle and any unused product within 90 days from purchase date, and I'll send you all your money back," he says.

The Hotline will be open for the next 48 hours. After that, the phone number will be shut down to allow them to restock. Call 1-800-765-0046 to secure your limited supply of Primal Max Red and free bottles of Primal Max Black. Water levels expected to fall short of record

Thirty-three years ago, in October 1986, water levels on Lake Michigan and Lake Huron reached their highest point – 582.35 feet above sea level – in the period of record dating back to 1918, when official tracking of such things began.

Federal forecasters, hydrologists and university experts were expecting that record to be replaced this summer, as the lakes approached their annual peak already buoyed by abnormally high water that barely dropped this past winter.

But the two lakes – which are hydrologically treated as one because of their connection at the Straits of Mackinac – don't appear ready to break the big annual record this year thanks to recent drier-than-expected weather across the region.

"It's looking like we'll probably stay below that number," said Deanna Apps, a scientist tracking Great Lakes water levels for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Detroit. "We expect the water levels this month to stay relatively steady, probably drop off as the month goes on."

That's likely welcome news for property owners and municipalities along the coast, which have spent millions to armor shorelines and protect critical infrastructure. But experts caution that the two lakes remain in record territory and coastal areas aren't out of the woods by a long shot.

"Folks that are impacted will continue to be for a while," said Lauren Fry, a hydrological researcher at the National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Great Lakes Environmental Research Laboratory in Ann Arbor.

Lakes Michigan and Huron remain more than two-and-a-half feet above their long-term July average and three inches above last summer's peak. July is poised to be the seventh consecutive month this year the lakes will exceed their monthly average. Provisional data puts them at 582.18 feet as of July 10. That matches the June monthly average from a few weeks ago – about two inches below the all-time annual record.

The lakes typically begin to decline in the summer and taper through the fall and winter, rising again in the spring. Apps and Fry say the drop probably won't be very noticeable until the region experiences prolonged dry conditions.

The recent hot weather has warmed surface temperatures on the lakes considerably – and earlier in the summer than usual – but that isn't expected to really drop lake levels until cooler, dry air creates the necessary temperature differential that drives evaporation. That usually occurs in the fall – which can be a something of a seasonal wild card.

Drew Gronewold, a lake level researcher at the University of Michigan, said soil moisture remains high in Michigan and upper Wisconsin despite the recent hot weather and that means any rainfall over land more easily turns to runoff.

Gronewold thinks the annual record is unlikely to fall this year, but there's still time. A big storm could change the equation. The 1986 record came in the fall, a season of intense storms on the Great Lakes. Precipitation over the surface area of the lakes themselves is considered the primary factor in lake level rise.

For lakes Michigan and Huron to best the all-time record, "it would take a pretty energetic storm – but we just had one with some pretty large precipitation last week," Gronewold said.

"It's unlikely, but we're really close to it. We do get a lot of storms in October."

In the meantime, the lakes will continue to make their presence known along the coast. They have flooded city streets, washed out state highways, inundated sewer systems, reconfigured state parks, erased beaches, eroded bluffs from underneath homes and turned seawall and revetment construction into a booming business.

"I don't think anybody wants to hit the record," said Kate Hosier, interim city manager in South Haven, which has estimated costs up to $20 million due to high water.

South Haven residents have caught fish on Dunkley Avenue, part of which has been underwater for months due to the city's effort to keep floodwater from entering the sanitary sewer system. The city is using pumps to push wastewater effluent to the Black River and installed big sand barriers in front of its drinking water treatment plant to protect a large reservoir under its popular South Beach area from the lake.

Practically speaking, the record is little more than an unwelcome benchmark in an ongoing struggle.

"When you get a storm, you don't really see that water dropping at all," Hosier said. "It pretty much still comes over the piers and the docks."

"We very much want the water to go down."

Van Buren youth can showcase fair animals, projects online

By HP STAFF

HARTFORD — Van Buren Youth Fair may have been canceled this summer, but 4-H youth will still be able to showcase their exhibits and projects online.

The Van Buren 4-H program is teaming up with Clinton and Eaton county's 4-H programs to put together an online program that allows 4-H members and other youth the chance to display their exhibits and projects.

"Youth have worked so hard on their 4-H projects this year and even though we cannot see them in person, we are excited to see their work," said Janice Zerbe, educator for Michigan State Extension in Paw Paw, which helped put together the MSU Virtual Learning Showcase.

Zerbe acknowledged the virtual showcase won't have the same ambience as an in-person fair, but said it gives youth, who have worked all year to showcase their animals and projects, the opportunity to share what they have learned and receive feedback from a judge to help them plan for next year's projects and exhibits.

"We want to make sure all youth have the opportunity to showcase mastery of skills learned through their projects, receive constructive feedback, and be recognized for accomplishments in both still exhibits and animal projects," she said.

Van Buren Youth Fair would have taken place this week, but was canceled like many other fairs in Michigan, due to efforts to slow the spread of the coronavirus.

Van Buren decided to team up with the Clinton and Eaton's 4-H programs, because those fairs are also held in mid-July.

The showcase will be open to all youth in the three counties.

The virtual showcase will offer animal showmanship classes as well some static/still exhibits, including photography, fine arts, and arts and crafts. Youth that plan to participate in animal showmanship must have met the county deadline related to each species.

Registration will be done through FairEntry: https://fairentry.com/Fair/SignIn/14801. Entries are due on or before July 22. Results will be announced the week of July 27.

Youth entering in showmanship for dairy, beef, feeder calves, sheep, goats, swine, dogs, cats, pocket pets, horses, and draft horses will need to upload one image with the youth and their animal and one video, 90 seconds or less. Narration will not be allowed.

Youth entering in showmanship for rabbits and/or poultry will need to upload one image with the youth and their animal and one video (2-3 minutes). Narration is not allowed. Youth wishing to enter static/still exhibits can submit up to six images per project.

For more information about uploading exhibits, email Corissa Harris, harri446@msu.edu, Krisy Oosterhouse, oosterh6@msu.edu or Janice Zerbe, rajzerj@msu.edu. For more information about the MSU Virtual Learning Showcase, visit https://www.canr.msu.edu/virtual-showcase.

Grand Junction man critical after being stabbed

GRAND JUNCTION — A 25-year-old Fennville man faces felony assault charges for an alleged stabbing incident late Tuesday evening that left a 30-year-old Grand Junction man in critical condition.

Van Buren County Sheriff's deputies were dispatched at 11 p.m. to a residence near 55th Street for a report of a man who had been cut with a knife.

The victim, who had been taken to Bronson South Haven Hospital by a personal vehicle, had been cut and stabbed multiple times on his torso, according to a news release from the sheriff's department.

The stabbing victim was later transferred to Bronson Methodist Hospital in Kalamazoo, where he was listed in critical condition. However, the sheriff's department stated in their release the injuries are not believed to be life threatening.

Deputies found the suspect later and took him into custody with assistance from the Allegan County Sheriff's Department. The suspect was taken to Van Buren County Jail awaiting arraignment on a charge of felonious assault.

The event can be viewed on the Facebook page of both the North Berrien Historical Museum and Watervliet District Library. Look for the event "Watervliet Paper: A History at Work."

COVID-19 case spike continues in tri-county area

By ALEXANDRA NEWMAN
HP Staff Writer

Berrien County is back over 100 active COVID-19 cases after adding 16 new cases Wednesday.

The 16 new cases came with an additional three recoveries, according to the Berrien County Health Department's COVID-19 data dashboard.

Michigan reported the largest single-day COVID-19 case tally in two months on Wednesday, with 891 new cases and four deaths.

Berrien County has had a total of 875 cases, 710 recoveries and 60 deaths.

The county's COVID-19 death toll has been at 60 since June 18.

Health officials have said that deaths will lag behind spikes in new cases, as diagnosis comes before hospitalization and hospitalization usually comes before death.

Spectrum Health Lakeland was treating seven COVID-19 patients as of Wednesday morning, one more than last Wednesday.

Chalet of Niles – Nursing and Rehabilitation Center has added a new resident case and a new staff member case since Sunday, according to the state's long-term care facility data.

The Cass County Medical Care Facility has added one resident case and seven staff cases since Sunday.

Van Buren and Cass county's COVID-19 case totals also continue to increase.

Cass County reported 11 new cases Wednesday. The county has gained about 32 cases in the last week.

Van Buren County has gained about 25 new cases since last Wednesday.

Cass County has had a total of 191 cases and six deaths, while Van Buren has had 254 cases and eight deaths.

The Van Buren Cass District Health Department will update its number of recovered individuals on Friday.

HOROSCOPE

By EUGENIA LAST

THURSDAY, JULY 16

Show off what you have to offer this year. Demonstrating your skills will help you take your marketability to the next level. A slight twist to an old plan will encourage unexpected opportunities. The possibilities are endless if you believe in yourself wholeheartedly. Put your memory and experience to good use.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Check out what others are doing to find inspiration for your next move. An unusual offer will entice you. Make sure it's what you want before you commit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Participate in self-help programs and work on personal growth, enlightenment and compatibility with a loved one. Make health, fitness and peace of mind priorities. Romance is in the stars.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone will let you down. Don't rely on others to handle your responsibilities or stand up on your behalf. The shortest route to success is to do the work yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Channel your energy into something useful. Getting involved in an argument won't help you get ahead. Make personal improvements, educational pursuits and physical fitness your priorities. Romance is featured.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) New methods and innovative technology will make your job easier and encourage you to branch out in diverse directions. Modify conditions and circumstances in your favor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A commitment will have an emotional impact on your life. Be prepared to compromise and to fulfill your promises. Be honest with yourself as well as a partner or loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll accomplish the most if you don't rely on others. An opportunity will change your life and give you the momentum to tidy up loose ends and move on quickly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Handle emotional situations with compassion and understanding. Pour your heart and soul into the home, family and personal growth. Share your feelings and do something beautiful for a loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Emotional discord will disrupt your domestic scene if you neglect responsibilities and promises. You can't buy love, so don't spend money to impress others. Joint ventures will face continued setbacks.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be astute, learn as you go and take nothing for granted. Put your energy and time where they count and be willing to do the grunt work required to get what you want.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A deal that promises riches, beauty or popularity will tempt you. If it sounds too good to be true, do your research and interrogate your motives before you take a chance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Exaggeration will not be well-received. Stick to the facts, show compassion and take the high road when faced with opposition. Being at odds with the majority will leave you dangling.

Man's indecision puts his marriage on shaky ground

DEAR ABBY: I have been with my husband for 29 years, 25 of them married. We have had good times and bad, like most couples, but over the last four years, things have changed. We came to a place where we both needed to decide whether we wanted to continue in our marriage. We went to counseling, and I pursued my own personal growth, trying new things I was interested in and finding gratitude and happiness in my interests and career. My husband did the same thing.

Jeanne Phillips
Dear Abby

Now I have moved past it, forgiven, told my husband I love him and hope he feels the same. You know what he said? He said he doesn't know. He said he needs more time. Frankly, it has already been a long time, and it's upsetting to have to wait for him to make up his mind.

If I become frustrated, he says I don't have to stay and I'm free to do what I want. Trouble is, I want my husband, and I want him to want me back. What do I do? I take good care of myself and have a healthy sex drive. Sex happens rarely, and I end up being rejected more often than not. He also had an emotional affair with a woman he knows, but he thinks I made too much of it. That was about 18 months ago. Help, please. – Uncoupling In Canada

DEAR UNCOUPLING: Going off and being independent may have been the wrong path to take. Your husband appears to have disconnected from you, both physically and emotionally. When he went off and "tried things he was interested in," among the things he tried may have been the woman with whom he had the affair.

If you continue waiting for your husband to make up his mind, you could be sitting in limbo for years. You take care of yourself, have a healthy sex drive and are entitled to a life. Now may be time to make one for yourself.

DEAR ABBY: For the past year my sister has been involved with a guy she went to high school with. He moved in with her and her 4-year-old son.

Before he moved in, my sister, my mom and I had a pretty decent relationship. Since this boyfriend has come into the picture, our relationship has become strained. He doesn't work, doesn't like her son, and she pays for everything (rent, food, car payments, etc.). Whatever he says, logical or not, she does it.

Recently, my nephew's father reached out to me because she hasn't let him see their son. When I asked my sister why, she had no reasonable explanation. I don't know what to do at this point. She won't even let the family see my nephew now. What should I do? – Mad In Maryland

DEAR MAD: Your sister's boyfriend has succeeded in isolating her, and it is a very dangerous red flag. This is what abusers do, and you should worry not only about her, but also her son, whom the boyfriend doesn't like. Could they be hiding the child because he has bruises?

As to the father of the boy, if he has been contributing financially for his son, he may, with the help of a lawyer, be able to exert enough influence to get his visitation back. Please suggest it.

For now, all you can do is tell your sister you are concerned for her well-being because she is carrying the whole load. Tell her you are also concerned for the child and that no matter what, you love them both and will be there for them. She needs to hear it. And if necessary, contact child protective services.

Should I keep subjecting my daughter to her dad's indifference?

HI, CAROLYN: My daughter's father is from a foreign country where he is back now as a tourist "driver." I have taken her to see him several times in the last decade and every time he spends less time with her. I could hire him as our driver, but I refuse to do that. He should want to spend as much time with her as possible.

Carolyn Hax

I want to tell him if he wants to see her again, then he needs to come here, which I would pay for. I know my daughter would be crushed if I told her we are not going back to see her dad. She does not seem to let his indifference bother her and she says she loves him all the time. How do I handle this? – Bothered

BOTHERED: It's painful to watch your kid be ignored by someone who "should" care. With "should" being, as always, the most useless word in our language when it comes to planning and decision-making.

But as painful as it is, here's a reason to visit: If you stop, then he likely won't come – right? – and therefore your daughter will associate his absence with your decision.

If instead you keep visiting, then your daughter will be able to connect any estrangement with his behavior, to which she can respond directly.

Plus, telling her she can't go is a big change for her to process at once – whereas a series of less and less rewarding visits will educate her incrementally, as she is also growing up and developing emotional resilience.

I understand your impulse to correct her unrealistic view of her dad, because, again, it's hard to watch her get hurt. But reality itself will be a better messenger than a mom (yes?) who's losing her patience – if for no other reason than letting reality handle it allows you not to put your own bond with your kid on the line.

RE: FATHER: My goddaughter used to say she loved her dad all the time. She visited him for two weeks a year, and every year, he'd hire a babysitter to take care of her not only while he worked, but in the evenings when he dined out and came home in time to say goodnight. The other adults in her life really struggled with whether to let her keep visiting, but he was dying, and she kept saying how much she loved him.

Come to find out she was saying that to keep us from knowing how hurt she was by the way he treated her. But when I ask her if we should have stopped the visits, she says no, because he was the dad she had and she needed to work it out for herself. Which she did, eventually.

Keep taking your daughter to see her father and be there for her as she figures out what she probably already knows: He's not the father she wishes she had. But he's the father she does have, and she needs to come to grips with that in her own way. The best we can do for kids with an unsatisfactory parent is, I think, to love them through it all, and never, ever, ever make them choose. – Anonymous

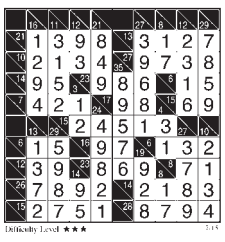
How to play: Numbers above the slash are across clues; numbers below the slash are down clues. The goal is to enter digits 1-9 in the white cells to add up to the number clues. You cannot use any digit more than once when adding up to a clue.



BRIDGE

G.H. Lewes, a 19th-century English philosopher and critic, wrote, "We must never assume that which is incapable of proof."

Usually in bridge, the best play can be proven. Occasionally, though, we have to guess what to do. At other times, making one assumption leads to another. Because we assume A to be true, then B must be also.

How does that apply in today's deal? South is in four hearts. West cashes the spade ace: three, nine, jack. He continues with the spade king: six, two, four. Then West plays a third spade: 10, queen, ruff. What should declarer do next?

Most pairs would stop in a heart partscore. But we need North-South in four hearts to have a story to tell.

South has lost two tricks and must concede a trick to the heart ace. So, he cannot afford to lose either a club or a second trump. That leads to the first assumption: West holds the club king.

So, what about the trump suit? If the missing hearts are 2-2, there is no problem. If they are 3-1, though, declarer needs the ace to be a singleton. But which defender is more likely to have that ace?

So far, West is known to have 10 high-card points: the spade ace-king and club king (necessary from assumption one). This makes it more likely that East has the heart ace. It isn't certain, but with 14 points, West would probably have bid.

South should play a diamond to dummy's jack and return a low heart. Here, East has to win with his ace, and shortly South is scoring up his lucky game.

Nursing homes allow visits in N.Y., but few can open doors

By KAREN MATTHEWS and MARINA VILLENEUVE
Associated Press

NEW YORK — New York began to allow people to visit loved ones – with restrictions – at nursing homes Wednesday, but few homes have opened their doors.

Just 22 of more than 600 nursing homes in New York have submitted needed safety plans to allow limited visits, according to the state Department of Health.

And it's unclear just how many of them started allowing visits Wednesday.

Only nursing homes and long-term care facilities without any coronavirus cases among residents and staffers in the last 28 days can allow limited visits, under a plan announced by State Department of Health Commissioner Howard Zucker on Friday.

Zucker's agency had estimated that as many of one-fourth of the state's nursing homes could qualify under that metric.

New York State Health Facilities Association President & CEO Stephen Hanse said the 28-day requirement is tough for nursing homes with large staffs.

"We're not sure where we're going in the future, in terms of a second potential uptick in COVID-19," he said.

"We really need to provide families the opportunity to visit with their loved ones in person."

New York's rules are aimed at curbing the spread of the virus by visitors, particularly those without symptoms: Visitors face temperature checks and must wear face masks and abide by social distancing.

Residents can only have two visitors at a time, no more than 10 percent of residents can have visitors at any one time, and the state's rules limit visitation to outdoor areas, weather permitting.

Northwell Health spokesperson Barbara Osborn said the health care system plans to allow outside-only visits starting Monday at its two nursing homes on Long Island. She said both facilities have been COVID-free for 28 days, and that the system plans to submit its plans to the state this week.

In other coronavirus-related developments from New York:

New York has not seen a significant uptick in infections as the state has slowly reopened its economy starting in May, but Gov. Andrew Cuomo has sought to crack down on travelers from states, where COVID-19 is spreading at higher rates. He's also urging New Yorkers to wear masks, wash their hands and stay 6 feet away from others.

"We cannot go back to the hell we experienced three months ago, so please stay vigilant and New York tough," Cuomo said Wednesday.

About 1.3 percent of people tested in New York for COVID-19 Tuesday were positive, according to Cuomo's office. Nine deaths from the virus were reported.

Biden, Gates, other Twitter accounts hacked in Bitcoin scam

Unidentified hackers broke into the Twitter accounts of technology moguls, politicians, celebrities and major companies Wednesday in an apparent Bitcoin scam.

The ruse included bogus tweets from former President Barack Obama, Democratic presidential front-runner Joe Biden, Mike Bloomberg and a number of tech billionaires including Amazon CEO Jeff Bezos, Microsoft co-founder Bill Gates and Tesla CEO Elon Musk. Celebrities Kanye West and his wife, Kim Kardashian West, were also hacked. The fake tweets tweets offered to send $2,000 for every $1,000 sent to an anonymous Bitcoin address.

There is no evidence that the owners of these accounts were targeted themselves. Instead, the hacks appeared designed to lure their Twitter followers into sending money to an anonymous Bitcoin account. The Biden campaign, for instance, said that Twitter's integrity team "locked down the account within a few minutes of the breach and removed the related tweet."

Obama's office had no immediate comment. The FBI said it was aware of Twitter's security breach, but declined further comment.

In a tweet, Twitter noted that it was aware of a "security incident impacting accounts on Twitter." The San Francisco company said it is investigating and promised an update shortly. It did not reply immediately to requests for comment.

The apparently fake tweets were all quickly deleted, although The Associated Press was able to capture screenshots of several before they disappeared. The security problem was severe enough for Twitter to warn that many of its more than 166 million daily users might be unable to tweet or reset their passwords while the company tried to lock things down.

Among the political figures targeted, the hack mostly appeared to target Democrats or other figures on the left, drawing comparisons to the 2016 campaign. U.S. intelligence agencies established that Russia engaged in coordinated attempts to interfere in those U.S. elections through social media tampering and various hacks, including targeting the various campaigns and major party organizations.

The hack might also be a simple demonstration of Twitter's weak security controls as the U.S. heads into the 2020 presidential election, a contest in which the service is likely to play an influential role.

The Bitcoin account mentioned in the fake tweets appears to have been created on Wednesday. By the end of the day, it had received almost 12.9 bitcoins, an amount currently valued at slightly more than $114,000. At some point during the day, roughly half that sum in bitcoin was withdrawn from the account.

Bezos, Gates and Musk are among the 10 richest people in the world, with tens of millions of followers on Twitter. The three men are worth a combined $362 billion, according to the latest calculations by Forbes magazine. The same bogus offer cropped up a second time on Musk's account, which has a history of sometimes befuddling tweets from the eccentric billionaire.

A thunderstorm Saturday night sent tens of thousands of festival goers scrambling from the Venetian Festival in St. Joseph and canceled the main events. Lesli Nadolski, executive director, said the fireworks display will be held tonight instead, but she wasn't sure if performances by Loverboy and Tommy James and The Shondells would be rescheduled. St. Joseph police and other agencies were busy Saturday night handling the rush of traffic as the thunderstorm hit.

Construction began yesterday on the first phase of a $10 million condominium development at the Point O'Woods Golf & Country Club in Benton Township. The condominium development "is something that will put Point O'Woods and Benton Township more on the map than it already is," said club President Wendell DeBruin. Point O'Woods was rated by Golf Digest this year as among the top one-third golf courses in the nation.

Six "corporate golf cottages" will be offered for sale to corporations and eight "residential villas" owned by individuals will also be built as part of phase one. Both types of units will sell for about $200,000 each.

Money donated in Sgt. Herndon's name may be sent to Principal James Heathcote, St. Joseph High School Principal, Stadium Dr., St. Joseph. The goal is $325, which would purchase a trophy case to be placed in the high school with an identifying plaque.

Congress eyes new virus aid as school, health crisis deepens

By LISA MASCARO
AP Congressional Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Two months after House Democrats approved a $3 trillion COVID-19 aid package, Senate Republicans are poised to unveil their $1 trillion counteroffer, straining to keep spending in check as the virus outbreak spreads and societal fallout deepens.

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, who is expected to roll out the GOP bill as soon as next week, said Wednesday that he conferred with Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin as the White House's point man on the talks prepares to negotiate with Democrats.

But having hit "pause" in May, as McConnell put it, Republicans now face a potentially more dire situation. They had hoped the pandemic would ease and the economic fallout would reverse. Instead, coronavirus cases are spiking, states are resuming shutdowns and parents are wondering if it's safe to send children back to school.

"Regretfully, this is not over," McConnell said during a visit to a hospital in Kentucky.

"There were some that hoped this would go away sooner than it has," he said, urging residents to wear masks and social distance.

"The straight talk here that everyone needs to understand: This is not going away," McConnell said.

This would be the fifth virus rescue bill since spring, all told an unprecedented federal intervention to counter the times. Unlike any health crisis since the 1918 Spanish flu and an economic upheaval on par with the Great Depression, Congress is trying to engineer a comprehensive national strategy to bring the pandemic under control.

Polling shows Americans are increasingly uneasy over President Donald Trump's handling of the virus outbreak, and lawmakers are racing to ease the health and economic crises before they, too, face voters in November.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's sweeping $3 trillion coronavirus aid bill, once dismissed by McConnell and others as a liberal wish list, now seems not as far-fetched.

citizen of the Pokagon Band of Potawatomi, thanked the board for forming the committee.

"As an individual, I am disgusted every time I drive by the Dailey Road facility and read the sign out front because I know what his name means to me," she said. "I'm also ashamed that my tax dollars are celebrating this man who was responsible for the forced removal and the death of people as the architect of President Andrew Jackson's Indian Removal Act."

Holcomb said the committee will include a diverse group of people.

Board member Frank Ross said that if the name is changed, he doesn't want it to honor another person.

"We have to be careful not to fall into another trap," he said. "If we ended up naming this after somebody else, 10 to 15 years downstream, we may be redoing this, again."

He said that a generic name could be chosen, such as North Star or Wolverine.

Holcomb said he wants to give committee members the chance to create their own timeline and would report back to the board the committee's progress next month.

Channel rescue

First responders in South Haven have been kept busy all week responding to water-related incidents on Lake Michigan and in the Black River Channel, both of which are experiencing record-high water levels, with waves splashing over both the North and South piers on a regular basis.

The latest incident occurred Tuesday when a first responder from SHAES rescued two adults and a 3-year-old child after their canoe capsized in the Black River channel.

Responder Matthew Dey was on his mid-afternoon rounds checking the beach flags and pier life rings, according to a news release from SHAES, when he observed the capsized canoe with people in the water, all wearing personal flotation devices.

Dey threw a life ring to the man and was able to pull him and a child to a ladder along the channel. He then threw a second life ring to a woman and pulled her to the ladder. The canoe and personal belongings were also recovered.

On Sunday, just prior to receiving the 911 call regarding Evans, SHAES responders were called to the North Pier for a report of a man who had been swept off the pier into the Black River channel. Fortunately, Good Samaritans on the South Pier were able to throw him a life ring and bring him to safety.
